Bridge Federation of Asia & Middle East

The End Of The Round Robin

Abstract

Today we will find out which teams will represent BFAME in both the Women and Mixed Team World Championships. We will also know the four semi-finalists for the Open and Senior Team events. In all cases there will be finals to find the BFAME champions in all four contests.

In the Open Team India have a huge lead and something really strange would have to happen if they did not finish on top of the Round Robin rankings, UAE and Pakistan are fighting out for third place whilst Bangladesh will need a really good set of results if they are to move up to fourth place ahead of Jordan. Similarly in the Senior Team, India have a two match cushion ahead of Pakistan and Bangladesh. Jordan have an uphill task to leapfrog UAE for the fourth semi-final slot. The most interesting and close is the Women Team as only 23 points separate all four teams with UAE having a narrow advantage over India. The Mixed Team seems to have India assured of a berth but Jordan are not yet safe and will need to take care on the final day.

Round Up

Yet again we have a plethora of slams on the first deal of the day. Three of the four events started in such a fashion, the only one to spoil our full house was the Open Team. Here is the first deal of the day from the Senior Team. It also gave me my favourite auction of the tournament.

Board 1. Dealer North. None Vul.

2. $10-13$

What a gloriously pragmatic bid Six Spades is. With hands like these science goes out the window, the old adage of get your retaliation in first springs to mind. The only other approach is to make a minimum bid in spades and continue to do so until they give in and hopefully double you but then you are reliant on the opposition helping you-not always a good plan. One other table reached Six Spades but the opponents sacrificed in Seven Hearts which could have escaped for four off but declarer, unsurprisingly, did not play South for an eight-card club suit. The lead was the ace of hearts followed by a diamond ruffed in dummy, declarer played ace of clubs and another, overruffing West. Now the contract was safe. At trick three declarer's dilemma was whether to risk a 4-0 club split but I suspect if they were then he would fail anyway.

The first hand in the opening hand from the Mixed Team was.

The club slam is superior to the spade slam and basically only requires the trump suit to come in for one loser, which is over $80 \%$ of the time. Unfortunately no pair managed to bid it which mildly surprised me as one pair started with North bidding $2 \boldsymbol{\omega}$ showing $5 \boldsymbol{\omega}$ and a five-card minor, now to me that makes the South hand enormous and surely an effort could be made and if you find two keycards in the North hand you can more or less underwrite Six Spades if the clubs come in for one loser.

The Women were not to be done out of the fun as their first board of the day was.

Board 1. Dealer North. None Vul.

Again no one reached the slam as frequently there was a major barrage from the opposition. One West doubled the contract of Five Diamonds which would have been a poor result had North left it in, I would have redoubled with my three loser hand which would have resulted in a nice round score of 1000 . How many slams will there be today?

Board 26. Dealer East. All Vul.

Many of you will know that I am a great fan of the Biltcliffe coup of which this is very nearly an example, all that was missing was a double of the final contract, as you can see North could have passed out the hand in Two Clubs but he generously gave the opposition a second bite of the cherry and to mix metaphors, they quickly seized it. But it was now up to declarer to bring home the contract. The lead was the ace of spades and the suit continued and ruffed in hand. Declarer's first task is not lose two trump tricks and short of a defensive error I can see no other possibility than king queen doubleton, so declarer led a small club from hand and was no doubt relieved when North won with the queen. A diamond followed and the ten in hand held the trick. With a sharp intake of breath the ace of trumps saw the king fall from North. The final trump was drawn and the ace of diamonds cashed , leaving this position.

Decalrer now ruffed a spade and what was North to do? Whichever red suit he discarded would set up declarer's eleventh trick, in practice North discarded a heart as a diamond would have been immediately fateful. Now the king of diamonds was cashed and the hearts were good for the last four tricks. Poor North was genuinely squeezed. Declarer had a fair share of good fortune but when the Great Shuffler comes to your aid you still have to play correctly to take advantage thereof and that declarer did and did it well.

The contract does not look too auspicious but declarer's mood improved when the lead was the king of spades. Declarer is not home yet, even if the diamond finesse is successful there seems to be a loser there and probably two clubs and the little matter of the ace of trumps. Winning the first trick, trumps were tackled with East taking the first round and playing back a spade taken by the queen. Trumps were now drawn finishing in hand and this was followed by a successful diamond finesse. When East showed out the hand was now an open book, but how to take advantage? Declarer calmly cashed the jack of spades and then played dummy's last spade, discarding two clubs from hand and on the next round of spades from declarer coolly discarded a diamond. East now had no option but to play a club and it did not matter which one. Well played. Looking at the hand you would not have thought the contract would me made by letting East win two spade tricks.

Declarer received the lead of a diamond which he won in hand with his singleton ace. He immediately set about scoring spade ruffs in dummy by ducking a round of spades to North who returned a trump. Winning in hand declarer now ruffed a spade. Declarer is now at the crossroads, he has basically three lines of play, the first is that the hand that does not have a spade does not hold the jack of trumps, the second is the heart finesse and the third is that the hand with the long spade has the queen of hearts and so can be squeezed. With all four hands available to us we can see which is the correct option to take but I do not see any compelling evidence for any particular line. I can see some logic in taking line three as that may work even if line one would have worked so you might just be getting an extra nibble at the cherry. However declarer did not stake all on the spade/trump position and so was unlucky but I do not think he can blame himself. So ten IMPs to UAE.

West seemed a little timid in not finding a bid and preferably a double. The defence got off to a good start with the king of hearts, declarer winning and leading the jack of diamonds. West hopped up with her ace and switched to a club. East now cashed two clubs, two hearts and the ace of trumps and continued with the master heart. Declarer ruffed with the jack and West fell from grace when she overruffed, discarding a minor-suit card would have left her with two trump tricks rather than just the queen, but the good news it would not have changed the IMPs.

I suspect there was a minor misunderstanding in this auction with East believing 2NT was some sort of Lebensohl but no other bids were mistreated in this auction. To fulfil the contract declarer only needed to set up a couple of heart tricks and when the defence continued the attack in spades an overtrick was scored along with ten IMPs for India.

Five Hearts was a good save against Four Spades but are you bidding Five Spades as a sacrifice or to make? It has the feeling to me of neither. I am certainly not at all confident of making Five Spades but I do not see them making Five Hearts, after all I do have a defensive trick. The contract was not without hope, as the cards lie there is only one defence, viz. lead a heart and return a diamond. Unfortunately for declarer it was not a difficult defence to find. From a commentator's point of view I would have liked East to hold $$ \mathrm{~K} 9$, would they have unblocked the king under the ace of clubs? Unfortunately we shall never know, but I bet if you ask the player they will reply in the affirmative ©

West did not avail herself of the sacrifice leaving declarer with the relatively easy task of making ten tricks when the clubs broke favourably. So twelve IMPs to UAE.

Board 6. Dealer East. E/W Vul.

West led her singleton spade which East won with his ace and now made a rather strange play in that he cashed his ace of diamonds and then led a spade for West to ruff. He no longer had an entry in his hand to give partner the game-setting ruff in spades. I cannot see the ace of diamonds running away so what is the hurry, if partner's spade was singleton the contract is going and if it was not it is probably making but it is almost certainly making if you cash the A.

What's a point between partners? The effect of the two-bid was to silence the opposition. The defence can, in theory prevail, but with the spades breaking 3-3 declarer will nearly always succeed. To beat the contract the defence must cash their ace of clubs and then continually force declarer with heart leads. That would have saved three IMPs but with the contract making that was eleven IMPs to India.

It looks to me that there was confusion in the ranks as to whether system was 'on' or 'off' after the redouble with each having an opposing view. Hopefully now the partnership have resolved the matter but they were in a contract which broke Burns Law, i.e. the opposition have more trumps than you. AS you can imagine the contract was not a success but only failed by two tricks-no doubleno trouble. Amusingly, well to me anyway, declarer managed to make her singleton $\vee 4$ in her own hand

An aggressive Double by East. We have the situation where one team is playing in the same denomination in both rooms, rarely a recipe for success. The opening club lead was taken by East who then cashed both his aces before exiting with a diamond. The queen of hearts was not covered and on the following low heart East inserted the 10 and declarer won with his ace. When his ten of spades held the next trick declarer can get out for one off by playing on trumps but this is not self-evident and might possibly be wrong if East had a third spade. Two down gave India nine IMPs.

Diamonds were led and continued, declarer ruffing the second round. Who then started on a crossruff by cashing the ace of clubs and ruffing one in dummy. She back to hand with the king of hearts and ruffed yet another club. The ace of hearts was cashed before ruffing a diamond in hand. Another club was led but North ruffed in front off dummy with the jack of trumps. All that needed to be done now was to cash the ace of spades and lead anything as this would leave declarer with fewer trumps than South, whereas anything else would allow declarer to make three of the last four tricks. Unfortunately North, who has a complete count on the hand, mysteriously chose a heart, a suit which declarer had previously ruffed. Another game contract succeeds with a little help from the defence.

West did not take the same positive view of his hand as in the other room, true it is only twelve points but everything else about it is positive. Again North led a high diamond, but this time South overtook an switched to a trump allowing North to take two rounds. Declarer now just ruffed one club in dummy to bring the tally to nine tricks and the contract. With the game making in the other room this was seven IMPs to UAE. After a high-scoring incidentstrewn match the result was an honourable draw 42-42 or 10-10 VPs.

Whilst writing up this report I caught sight of India's next match in the Mixed Team against Jordan. Here are a couple of deals

Not the best slam you have ever been in but if the trumps come in for no lose then two out of three finesses will ensure success and today is your lucky day. With the diamond finesses cooperating and one of the two club finesses onside when the trumps behaved the slam rolled in.

If South's 4 shows a maximum and four spades then I think North is worth another effort, just give South AQxx Axx AKx Kxx and slam is a very high percentage (about 70\%). Declarer was not bothered to make an overtrick and so it was eleven IMPs to India.

Partner probably has a singleton heart and diamond support - also he bid freely, does that not make you think it is worth investigating - I suspect a Four Hearts bid would elicit a Five Clubs response and now I would have the Six Diamonds card on the table before you say 'Diamonds are a girl's best friend'. You would make seven if the diamonds had no loser.

When you have a good play for all thirteen tricks and are not even in game you can be sure that somewhere a wheel has fallen off the bidding wagon and I shall point the finger at Three Diamonds. This cannot be forcing, I suggest doubling again and bidding diamonds over whatever partner bids. He should get the message that you have a huge hand with diamonds, of if you are lucky enough that he replies in clubs then even better. In some ways an escape for both teams but a better escape for Jordan as they netted ten IMPs but it could have been eleven out.

Declarer made a misclick which was unfortunate and meant the contract failed by two tricks.

Without the problem of a misclick could South find a way against the unfriendly trump split. West led the king of diamonds which declarer won in hand with the singleton ace and immediately played the king o hearts pinning the ten in East's hand.To beat the contract West needs to switch to a spade as that will establish a spade trick before declarer can eliminate the trumps and run the clubs. Naturally West tried to cash the queen of diamonds so declarer ruffed and continued to force out West's high trumps. With West not having any more diamonds declarer could not be forced and so could deal with the trumps and then cash the clubs. 15 very large IMPs for Jordan Another ding-dong battle for India and yet again a high scoring draw, this time even bigger 43-43.
