

My bridge life began in college where I learned to play by observation. After graduation I played "social" bridge before beginning to play duplicate at the Little Rock Bridge Club. However, I gave it up when life got too complicated with my job and my children's extracurricular activities.

After not playing any bridge for over twenty-five years, I returned to the Little Rock Bridge Club in 2015. Unfortunately for me, bidding had changed. I still relied on Goren's "Point Count Bidding" and Sheinwold's "Five Weeks to Winning Bridge" and had no interest in changing how I played or learning a lot of new conventions. Last year I finally started playing "two over one" and a few other conventions, but they are not totally ingrained on my brain. I have a lot of relapses and my partners have to bear with me - I am trying to improve my game!
