

This map illustrates the Delaware River Valley, showing the river's course from its headwaters in the north to its mouth in the Chesapeake Bay. The river is depicted in blue, with its major tributaries, the Schuylkill River and the Christina River, also shown. The map highlights the urban areas of Philadelphia, Camden, and Wilmington, and the surrounding regions of Bucks, Montgomery, and Delaware counties. Key highways and roads are marked with numbers and colors, and the map includes labels for various towns and cities, such as Reading, Pottstown, Quakertown, Princeton, Levittown, and Atlantic City. The Delaware River is shown flowing through the heart of the region, connecting the inland areas to the coastal waters of the Chesapeake Bay.

This map illustrates the Delaware River Valley, a significant geographical and economic region. The Delaware River is shown flowing from the north, where it meets the Schuylkill River, southward through Philadelphia and Camden, eventually emptying into the Atlantic Ocean. The river valley is delineated by a thick black line. Major urban centers like Philadelphia, Camden, Trenton, and Wilmington are clearly marked. The map also shows the surrounding states of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Maryland, and the Atlantic Ocean. Key features include the Delaware River, its tributaries (Schuylkill River, Christina River), and the surrounding land and water bodies. The map is a detailed representation of the region's geography and infrastructure.
